A Spanish Execution.

I had an opportunity, while at Barcelona, of being present at an execution, the first I had seen in spain. The man had been condemned to the galleys for some previous offence, and had murdered one of his fellow-convicts; and, although this is not an agreeable spectacle, yet, as in every country, public spectacles, whether agreeable or the reverse, exhibit some peculiarities either of character or of manners. I resolved to be present Three o'clock was the hour appointed; and all that morning, as well as a great part of the day before, there was an unceasing noise of little bells, carried through the streets by boys in scarlet cloaks, with the bell in one hand, and a box Peperine, o gals.
